Literacy Champions Symposium

September 27, 2019 | Capitol Plaza | Montpelier, VT | 8:30 am - 3:30 pm

Spend the day with literacy champions as we unpack decades of research and learn how we can grow strong readers and writers.

Louisa Moats, Ed.D., kicks off the day busting myths about reading, discussing the state of literacy education, and showing us how spelling and reading are interconnected. A nationally recognized expert on how children learn to read and why some struggle to learn, Dr. Moats is the author or coauthor of numerous books and publications on reading instruction, the professional development of teachers, and the relationship between language, reading, and spelling.

Nancy Mather, Ph.D., will spend the afternoon focusing on effective interventions for children who struggle with reading, spelling, and written language. If you are a classroom educator, school psychologist, diagnostician, special educator, reading teacher, speech and language pathologist, school administrator, or the parent of a child with dyslexia, please join us and be a literacy champion!
